Real World Trade Plans and Strategies

A 35 Year Journey

The Dynamic Trading Master Course is the result of over 35 years of trading, teaching and developing practical training material for traders in over 30 countries. I wrote and produced the first self-study trading course that I am aware of in the late 80's. That course was an integration of Gann, Elliott Wave and Fibonacci time and price trade techniques, so you can see I've been doing this a long time. I've made an extensive study of accelerated learning techniques which I've applied to this latest comprehensive course.

A Year In Development

This course was over a year in development and production. Great care has been taken to present the material in the most efficient and logical format and progression. I hired Daniel Park of DapperText.com who developed certification courses for TechSmith for Camtasia, Snagit and more to produce the course to the highest standards. He has done a terrific job integrating the lesson material, quizzes, video and support materials.

I know you will quickly see the difference from the Dynamic Trading Courses and other trading courses that are often no more than stream of consciousness talking with screen captures.

One Lesson At A Time

There are over 25 hours of lesson materials. Each lesson is 15 – 30 minutes. Plus, some lessons and each chapter includes a quiz and each course has a final exam.

The course must be taken in the order presented. I'm sure many of you are like me. You are anxious to get through the material as quickly as possible and want to skip the material you think you are already familiar with. If you do this, you will not learn the full value of each lesson and the proper terminology and processes.

Quizzes and Exams Are Important Part of the Learning Process

The lesson and chapter quizzes and course final exams are a very important part of the learning process. You cannot continue to the next lesson or chapter until you complete a quiz with 100% correct. If you do not score 100% on the exam, no worries. You can retake just those questions you missed the first time.

Even if you believe you are familiar with some of the concepts and strategies in the course, don't skip any lessons. Each lesson is there for a reason and purpose and is part of the step-by-step learning process.

Don't rush through the course. Ideally, you do one or two lessons each day. See how what you have learned applies to the recent and current position of the markets you like to trade. If properly studied, the course should take you three to four weeks to complete, the first time. I am sure you will return to certain lessons and chapters many times in the months and years to come as The Dynamic Trading Master Course becomes your most important trading educational material.

An important part of the learning process is to apply each technique as you learn it to immediate market activity.

Comprehensive Support Materials

At the end of each chapter are comprehensive support materials that include notes, comments and chart illustrations of what you have learned in the chapter. The support materials are an important part of the learning process and the review.

If you are like me and like to print material to read and maybe make additional notes, you might use a three ring binder to organize the support materials and where you can make additional notes if you choose as you review the material.

Or, create a folder to save the support material PDFs.

Course Completion Certification

A Dynamic Trading Master Course certification of completion is available to those who have completed the complete curriculum of five courses, each course final exam and a Course Certification exam. This is not a complicated process or difficult exam but does show you put the effort into learning all the course material and do have a proficiency in all the material included in the course.

At this time, the DTMC (Dynamic Trading Master Course) Completion Certification is an “in house” designation that will allow you to be part of webinars and special tutorials only for those who have completed the Course Certification. We’ll have more to share with you on this in the weeks ahead.

I know you will find the extra benefits we have for those who complete the certification exam will be worthwhile.

Time To Get To Work

That's it for now.

It's time to get to work and begin your practical trade strategies journey with Practical Elliott Wave Trade Strategies, the first course in The Dynamic Trading Master Course.
